

The Samaritan Inn, established in 1989, is a residential recovery program that guides highly independent, self-directed recovery with supportive services for up to nine adult men. Our goal is to provide a safe and secure environment in which a man receives guidance, support, and services that lead toward permanent positive change.

Our Vision

The Samaritan Inn offers a well-developed program and support services to empower men to be productive, independent citizens in our community.

Values & Beliefs

- People can change and change is a process
- Permanent change comes from within
- Self-sufficiency comes from empowerment and responsible internal direction
- Strength is realized through a holistic approach
- Each person has innate value to the world
- Each person possesses gifts to be recognized and great potential to be realized
- Recovery is a spiritual process
- Twelve step programs provide the most appropriate process for recovery
- The most effective motivation comes from respect and belief in the person
- There is power for positive change through group consensus and peer support

The Samaritan Inn provides a structured six to eighteen-month program that utilizes evidence-based practices.

Program Details

Upon entry, each resident works with staff to establish individualized goals designed to overcome the obstacles to permanent, independent living in recovery. Each resident is required to work, pay a small program fee, maintain his own living area, share the cooking and cleaning responsibilities, participate in a life skills curriculum, substance abuse education, case management and community volunteer activities.

With recovery at the forefront, the Samaritan Inn program helps to guide a man toward achieving his goals. Upon completion of the program, a man is fully immersed in recovery, is employed, and has attained safe, affordable housing. Upon graduation, the Samaritan Inn will offer up to $1,000.00 in transitional fees.

Charleston

Charleston. The Capital City. Situated at the confluence of the Elk and Kanawha Rivers, Charleston is the most populous city in West Virginia. Settled in the late 18th century, this frontier town has seen many changes over the centuries. From its early days as an important river shipping route to current day, this city and its people are forging a path into the future.

As of 2020, Charleston consists of an estimated 48,864 residents, while the metro-area contains roughly 208,089 permanent residents. Charleston is home to many award-winning hospitals and healthcare systems, plus nationally ranked colleges and universities that include the University of Charleston, West Virginia State University, plus branch campuses of West Virginia University and Marshall University.

As a cultural hub of the state, Charleston boasts many museums and attractions including Kanawha State Forest, The Clay Center, The West Virginia Museum, Haddad Riverfront Park, and the nationally distributed Mountain Stage on NPR.

Located at the intersection of Interstates 64, 77, and 79, the Capital City affords easy access to other regional metro areas within 500 miles including Indianapolis, Cincinnati, Columbus, Lexington, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Charlotte, Atlanta, and Nashville.
